October 13, 2011 – Seattle, WA-based singer-songwriter Lucas Field, former frontman of the heralded indie rock band Low vs Diamond, will make his much-anticipated solo debut with the release of Conquest of Happiness on November 15.

In a marked departure from Low vs Diamond, Conquest of Happiness features no guitars or synthesizers, instead embracing a ‘70s soul and R&B feel accentuated by Field’s songwriting depth and vocal texture.

“His lyrics have a nice American earthiness that undercuts his poetic aspirations,” points out the Los Angeles Times – and it is that honesty, warmth and easy-going nature that buoys the spirit of the 11-track solo debut. “Consequences went out the window when I started this record,” offers Field. “Musically and personally, the only thing I considered was what I felt at any given moment.”

Conquest of Happiness is slated for a November 15 release, but fans can get an early taste of the album at www.lucasfield.com, where Field is offering a free download of the bass-driven track “Just How It Goes.”
